Unfortunately, things don't always turn out as planned and it can be a real pain to find what you are looking for. Here are some recent discoveries that might help: - Search sites like this one, and find the latest applications you've downloaded, that you don't want anymore. There is a good chance that you will find them here. - Another way to make things easier is to use Key words, that is, words, you know you are looking for. For example, if you are looking for an application, you can type in the title of the application. The site will come up with a list of applications that match. - When you do find something that you want to use, it is very important to be sure that you have the correct version. Use a site like www.software-news-update.com or www.apps4u.com to see what the latest version is, and if you have an older version, it is time to upgrade.

In the last few months I've been approached and asked multiple times about my startup journey. It's very interesting to hear people's stories and experience but for me it's even more interesting to hear about the lessons I've learned from the experience and how I've applied those lessons in my own life and my startups. So I thought why not share the lessons I've learned along the way.

1. Startup bootcamps are for everyone, not just for Entrepreneurs I've gone through a number of startup bootcamps. I've also gone through other kinds of training in my career and the difference in the bootcamps was that they made you leave your comfort zone to push you out of your comfort zone. That was the most valuable lesson I learned from them. Other startup bootcamps where I attended: Angellist: High profile investor (AngelList) Seedcamp: 50 startups (Seedcamp) Oyster: 2 founders (CEO, business developer) Justina: 5 founders (CEO) Solve for x: 400 startups (VC fund) Institute of Entrepreneurship (IoE): More than 300 startups Of course, none of these bootcamps are the same as each other in terms of value proposition, education and investment. Each one of them provided different things in terms of the education and the network, but the biggest thing I learned is that startup bootcamps are for everyone. If you have an idea and you want to be an entrepreneur, if you have a passion and you want to work on it, if you want to learn something new and build a new skill set, there is a bootcamp for you.

2. Some jobs just don't work for an entrepreneur I've seen a lot of cofounders who fail to build a good support system for themselves because they're always on
