Windows Package Manager is a project that has been in development for over five years, and is the basis for numerous other packages that are used by many freeware communities. Although the package manager does not cover the whole spectrum of the Windows operating system it does cover the most used and basic functions for installing, updating, and maintaining freeware on Windows PCs. The Windows Package Manager project provides a GUI application to install software on Windows 7, Vista, XP and 2000 operating systems and also provides a GUI application to create a compatible WINS and SAM registry entries that are required to support this program on Windows 9x, ME and 2000 operating systems. Its main intention is not to fill a gap in functionality, but to give the best solution for installing, updating and maintaining freeware on Windows computers that are supported by both the Windows operating system and the application. If your Windows operating system is not supported, please contact the maintainer of the application to verify that this program supports your operating system. You may also contact the project's maintainer to ask about support for your operating system.
