The developers show that the motion capture data from athletes in motion is collected to tweak the simulation. "The level of control we will have is unprecedented," Xavi Pascual, FIFA Lead Designer, says. "With this kind of technology, the athletes are our players – and we are them. This is a unique opportunity to be able to see and feel the way the sport is played every day and how can we bring it into the game, right down to a fine level of accuracy." This is the first time that FIFA has used motion capture and it's taken more than two years to get the technology perfected for use in the game. Up to now, it has been based on the motion capture data collected by players who had previously starred in motion-capture motion-capture suits. The developers have been testing and refining this technology over the last 18 months, and now it's ready to release. Players have reacted positively to the technology, and EA Sports has promised that players will be able to have increased realism as the game evolves through its lifecycle. Real-life action game players have already supported the release of the FIFA 19 Season Pass. MORE: FIFA 20 Review FIFA 20 Review New Player Instincts This year's FIFA returns with new player traits, new formations, skills, ball control techniques, and dribbling controls. New Player Traits Traits are abilities activated during a timed interaction. Players can choose from eight player traits: Boost speed, Defence, Creativity, Direction Control, Passing, Positioning, Shot Power and Vision. The abilities offered by a player's trait depend on the complexity of that player's game. New formations FIFA 20 has 17 official formations that you can use in any game mode, from online tournaments and FIFA Ultimate Team to the game modes. New Skills There are 32 new skills in FIFA 20: dribble, pass, head, volley, shoot (curling), rocket, lob, speed boost, check, back, chip, chip while running, chip with one foot, crossbar, double-stop, fake, receive, regain balance, sprint, shoot in one touch, spring, turn, twist, wall, and wheel. New Ball Control Techniques The AI will initiate new tactics for their players based on what they perceive of your ball control techniques, allowing you to boost your ball control ratings, speed and
