Polling has been showing that young people are increasingly supportive of legalized marijuana. But the country has a plurality of people over the age of 60 who oppose it. Should that elderly bloc be swept away by the marijuana wave when the time comes? Not according to an opinion poll conducted last year by YouGov for the Pew Foundation and in partnership with the magazine Atria. Despite opposition from older voters, younger people are still likely to support marijuana legalization, and they're not bothered by the fact that more than half their peers say they oppose it. The pollsters asked a hypothetical group of 18-to-24-year-olds and a hypothetical group of 35-to-49-year-olds about their attitudes toward legalizing marijuana. Interestingly, the groups gave a little different answers. A majority of 18-to-24-year-olds supported medical use of the drug, a right to grow six plants, and full legalization. But they weren't entirely in favor of recreational use: The younger group said by a margin of 40 percent to 32 percent, they're opposed to making the drug legal for recreational use. By comparison, a majority of the older cohort opposed making marijuana legal for recreational use; but they also supported full legalization by a margin of 45 percent

Heart failure, coronary artery disease, and acute myocardial infarction are among the most serious conditions. Although the total number of deaths from these diseases has decreased in recent years, they remain important causes of morbidity and mortality. Significant advances in medicine in recent years have been directed toward treating and preventing these diseases. Advances in the areas of basic biological and clinical research, molecular biology, and diagnostic imaging techniques have led to improved methods of treating patients. However, mortality and morbidity of these diseases continue to be significant. Cardiac complications continue to be the most common and sometimes the only cause of death after open-heart surgery. One in every eight patients undergoing cardiac surgery develops a postoperative cardiac complication, of which postoperative arrhythmia (PAC) is the most common and a serious complication. Arrhythmia can be cardiac (e.g. supraventricular and ventricular arrhythmias), or arrhythmia that is not cardiac (e.g. ventricular tachycardia, supraventricular tachycardia). Ventricular tachycardia, which is a well-known cause of cardiac arrest, is the most serious type of arrhythmia. Supraventricular tachycardia is usually of atrial origin, and it occurs when the atria over-drive the ventricles. Atrial fibrillation (AF) is the most common type of supraventricular tachycardia. AF is the most common sustained arrhythmia in clinical practice, and may be the most common cause of ischemic stroke (25-30% of patients with ischemic stroke have AF at time of stroke) and other embolic stroke disorders. Arrhythmia is one of the most common post-operative complications after cardiac surgery. About 70% of all patients after cardiac surgery develop PAC, and a majority of them do so within the first postoperative week. The onset of (film) Heist is a 2016 American neo-noir crime comedy film directed by Steven Soderbergh, from a screenplay by Ben Lewin. The film received mostly positive reviews from critics, who praised Damon's performance, and was praised for its humor and its homage to classic gangster films. Plot Greggory (Damon) and Chase (Tatum), two childhood friends from Chicago, are preparing for a prison snitch-escapes the go-to hospital for Mafia-dealing prisoners. They give him a West Coast singer named Scratch to make him feel at home. When they are ready for their parole hearing, they learn that robbery is something of a parole violation and the judge cannot let them out without being ordered to do so by the parole board. Catching the thief on the loose is one option, but doing so will put one of them in prison for at least fifteen years, and presumably kill the remaining partner. While making arrangements to visit his family, Greggory feels that something is wrong. One of the security guards tells him that someone named Ezekiel Jones killed his son, killed his wife, and took his money. Greggy tells Chase to get his gun because the jobs they did were too risky. Meanwhile, Kelly (Affleck), a former mob lieutenant and mastermind of one of the robberies, is being approached by a judge when his cell phone pings. He enters his bank account and sends a message to Jones. Kelly already knew that he was named as the trigger man in the gang's robberies and was planning an elaborate revenge on Jones, whom he blames for his brother's death. While fleeing from the cops in his sister's car, Kelly sees the stolen truck he wants to use to hire his men. He also remembers that five of Jones' men were executed in

Chicago because Kelly himself decided that Jones should be killed. He invites them to rob the driver in this truck, explaining that the bandits are two steps ahead of them. They find three more guys that Jones' crew hired and who are now biding their time at a diner and a

I'm reading through Folland's Real Analysis and I'm stuck on the proof for this particular exercise. How do we go from $$\int_{\mathbb{R}}{|x^2 - y^2|^p dx}$$ to $$ 2 \cdot \max \{ \int_0^{1/2} x \cdot dx, \int_{1/2}^1 y \cdot dy \} $$ Folland's solution is as follows. First, he says that $x^2 \ge |x|^2$ Next, he says that $\int x dx = 0$ (I don't understand this step) and then he says that $$\int \frac{|x|^2}{2} = \frac{|x|^2}{2}$$ and thus, $$ \int_{ -\infty}^{+\infty} \frac{|x|^2}{2} = \int_{ -\infty}^{+\infty} x dx = 0 \cdot 2 + \frac{1}{2} \cdot 0 = \frac{1}{2} = \max \{0,1\}$$ Thus, we have $$\max \{0, 1\} \le \int_{\mathbb{R}}{|x^2 - y^2|^p dx} \le \max \{1, 2\}$$ $\int_{\mathbb{R}}{|x^2 - y^2|^p dx}$ can be written as $ \int_{\mathbb{R}}{(x^2 - y^2)^p dx}$
