Changing your workspace The easiest way to open Photoshop is to open your 'PhotoshopWorkspace.lsp' file located in the '.Photoshop CS' or '.Photoshop CS3' folder. If you have the _Photoshop CS Extended (CS6)_ plug-in installed, you can open the workspace, which is located in the '_extended\workspace' folder. Open the file named 'PhotoshopCS6Workspace.lsp' and follow the instructions shown in Figure 3-1. FIGURE 3-1: Open Photoshop's file that stores the settings. You can open several different work spaces for a single application, and you can switch to a different workspace at any time. For example, the Work Space C window shown in the figure is actually the Productivity workspace. By clicking the button at the right of the workspace name, you open the Tools Preferences window, which lists the available work spaces. After working in the Photoshop workspace for a while, you're probably used to the name of all the various icons on your toolbar, and your Personal Settings (covered in the next section). If you have a mouse or trackpad, you have the Control Panel, which includes the Tools & Options dialog box. You can make changes, from fonts to color, in the personal and workspace-level settings. These settings are located in different dialog boxes and individual settings, as shown in Figure 3-2. FIGURE 3-2: These dialog boxes are where you make all the settings for all the settings. After making all your preferences for printing or layouts, crop tool settings, and so on, click OK to close the dialog box and return to your workspace.

Presser HQ (press room) Presser HQ is a campaign media hub located on the campus of the University of Michigan-Dearborn, where its predecessor organization was housed. The organization was created in May 2011, a national campaign media hub for successful minority- and women-owned businesses (MWBEs). The organization is a year-round resource, 24/7, for promoting MWBE-owned small businesses and entrepreneurs as well as their products and services. It serves as a media resource for print and online outlets, including print and online newspapers. "Presser HQ takes into account the goals of the National Minority Supplier Development Council," said Ayda Nesibe Alak, managing director of the National Minority Supplier Development Council. "Presser HQ and its partners are working to better inform the public and increase awareness about the increasing participation of MWBEs in the overall economy." This May, Presser HQ was selected by Forbes Magazine as a finalist for Best for Women and Best for Hispanics. The organization is focused on creating awareness of the benefits of MWBE businesses among its communities, including Hispanic and African-American communities. Presser HQ was also selected by the United States Small Business Administration to participate in the "Why Women Win" Presidential Leadership Scholars Program, a two-week program that featured small business owners, government leaders and women's groups. With the announcement of the 2012 Center for African American Economics winners, Presser HQ was named a top 12 organization for its dedication to advancing the field. The center annually convenes its 2012 African American Economics Conference, the 2012 U.S. Small Business Administration Conference and the 2012 National Minority Supplier Development Council Conference. More than 50 local, state and national press releases (brochures) have been created for Presser HQ. The organization supports the National African American Chamber of Commerce, the National Coalition of Hispanic Chambers of Commerce and the National Council of Puerto Rican Chambers of Commerce. Presser HQ is a 501(c)(3) and has been a part of the Michigan Building Service Contractors Association since December 2010. Presser HQ helps to present and promote the 21st Century Business Solutions Awards, which honor and encourage excellence among business and business owners. In March 2012, Presser HQ was one of 10 organizations selected as Minority Business Development Center Partnerships for Education. Presser HQ's program, a six-month

You have a right to ask for whatever you want from the entity you signed the contract with, but I'll be damned if you are going to talk to anyone else from the entity while you are still holding their contract. So, simply put, you are the "other side". If you must communicate with the other side, then it is "better" to go to the other side's legal counsel and cut down on having to re-state what you want your contract to say in plain English. If you must ask questions, then "better" to speak to one of the other side's lawyers so they can help you if there are complex provisions in the contract. "Better" to ask yourself what your ability to enforce the contract really is, in terms of what an external court may decide after you breach the contract. You are also "better" to determine what your "expected" outcome is, that you want to see happen under the contract. Is it a good contract? Why or why not? I have a lawyer friend who has spent his career developing "hard-copy" contracts for use by very, very large corporations, many billions of dollars in value. I have also spent time with a law firm in construction and commercial litigation. Neither have any claim to expertise in contract law. It is obvious that you are new to the contracting game. You have a right to ask for whatever you want from the entity you signed the contract with, but I'll be damned if you are going to talk to anyone else from the entity while you are still holding their contract. I am not asking anyone else from this entity. I am talking to the entity directly for one thing and on another I am talking to the representative of the entity, him.
