"I paid the money because I enjoyed the movie." SDMT657 AVI (DMT) Q: Setting variables to html buttons This has to be easy but I am new to html scripting and could really use some assistance. I have a simple html page where I just want to set the form to an ajax call and then take the response from it and show the results as a table in a new page. However, I am having a little trouble getting the form to POST properly. I have a form that looks like this: I also have another form that is completely empty and I just want to have that one store the values I get from searching. I have tried this but when I call it nothing happens and the only thing I see on the console is an error message.

var searchForm = $('#txtSearch');
    var searchButton =
        $('#btnSearch');
    $('#txtSearch').keyup(function () {
        var value = $(this).val();
        searchForm.attr('action', '${pageCo ntext.request.contextPath}/secApp/search?search=value');
        searchButton.attr('action', '${page Context.request.contextPath}/secA pp/search'); if (!value.trim()) { searchButton.attr('disabled', 'disabled'); } else
