I'm one of those 12 people. I've been kinda/sorta on auto-pilot since my father's diagnosis in late 2012. He's now in hospice care and I'm re-discovering what it is to live with my own health issues. I've always been of the belief that "finding" your illness means losing your mind, and perhaps I was right, and now there is hope. Thank you for your postings on yoga. I've tried it a couple times. I think it is fun but too much to do before your brain is awake, whereas judo is great and easy to do during the day. The two are very different. It's so good to hear that you have a positive outlook. I hope everything goes well for you in your recovery. Hi Leslie, I love your name. How about, "the dodo" since my great-grandparents sailed to and from the north pole. (They're long gone). I was diagnosed in '95 with a mild form of rheumatoid arthritis but am still fighting. Has it worked out for you? My current pet peeve is the endless skyway-busy route of my m/c trips to Brooklyn. (There's a ferry!) I'm glad you and
