Photocatalysis by functionalized magnetic nanoparticles fabricated by electrodeposition. Coprecipitation of iron oxide with the dye N,N'-naphthalenebis(1,2-dicarboxypyridine) results in magnetic nanoparticles that show photocatalytic activity upon exposure to visible light. Nanoparticles possess an amorphous core that gives rise to the bulk optical absorption of dye molecules. Excess dye molecules diffuse to the surface and stabilize there by complex formation. Simulated packed-bed reactors using these cores were used to evaluate the effects of surface modifications on photocatalytic activity in aqueous solutions. Various iron oxide morphologies and surface groups were effectively immobilized onto aminated nanoparticles, including coating with organic thiols, carboxylic acids, and triazine dyes. The band gap of the iron oxide nanoparticles was perturbed, with surface groups modifying the absorption characteristics and resulting in purple-colored particles.

Todd's new friend is Mark Moseley, a young Texan who has spent the last three years in a psychiatric ward of a state hospital because he will not accept that he is the reincarnation of Satan. We are introduced to Mark during a group therapy session. He feels that he is responsible for 9/11, and rejects the theory of reincarnation. Mark and Todd bond and meet several times a week, though Mark is quiet and weird. He seems to be a sweet guy, but deeply troubled. In a flashback, we see the events that lead to Mark's condition. Like Mark, Todd was an only child. Todd's grandfather was an atheist pastor who was very proud of his son. Like many Evangelical Christians, Todd's grandfather asked God to come into his life. Todd's grandfather saw a great light and felt that God was speaking to him. He was touched by God and began to pray every night, "Jesus, if you are there, come into my life and help me." Since Todd's grandfather used to hit Todd's mother, Todd was terrified of him. Todd's mother told him that God would take care of things. So when Todd turned 8, he asked God to take away his grandfather's anger and to forgive his father. As Todd got older, his lack of faith and his fear of his grandfather grew. Todd's grandfather's habit of entering Todd's room at night continued. When Todd was 14, his grandfather physically restrained him from leaving the house. Finally, Todd was not allowed to believe in God. He was forbidden from reading the Bible, and told that he would go to hell if he didn't believe in God. One night,
