I'm trying to set a web crawler in Java. This is my code so far: import java.util.Random; public class Crawl{ public void crawl(){ } public static void main(String [] args){ Crawl c = new Crawl(); c.crawl(); }

} I want to use Crawl.crawl() inside of crawl() but I couldn't make it work. How could I? A: You need an enclosing class: public class Crawl { public void crawl(){ // do stuff } public static void main(String [] args){ new Crawl().crawl(); } } If you wish to pass parameters, you need to do so by passing them into the constructor of the parent class: public class Crawl { public void crawl(int param1){ // do stuff } public static void main(String [] args){ new Crawl(42).crawl(); } } Or you can pass a Callable as parameter to the constructor: public class Crawl { public void crawl(Callable function){ // do stuff } public static void main(String [] args){ new Crawl(() -> { return null; } }
