We have combined a high performance NMR spectrometer with a partially compensated pulsed gradient cryomagnet to investigate several biochemical parameters of the erythrocyte. The NMR instruments are designed in a compact 'toilet-like' arrangement, and simplify sample manipulation and automation. NMR is used to measure the relaxation times of water, lactate, glucose, and various membrane constituents. The methods we describe are highly sensitive to changes in the concentrations of these compounds, due to differences in their NMR relaxation times. This is illustrated for spectra of erythrocyte ghosts at different concentrations of lactate, glucose and hemoglobin.Q: How to resize Bootstrap button size based on the screen resolution? How to get the size of a Bootstrap button based on the screen size so that I can put it in a box Bootstrap: 3.3.6 A: The
