Ridge Shoot-No-Shoot Ridge is a mountain ridge, northwest of Longmont, Colorado, in a colorado state and county named Boulder County. The ridge is located northeast of the city of Boulder, at the West River, and has been the site of many wilderness and oil spills. About Shoot-No-Shoot Ridge Shoot-No-Shoot Ridge, a.019-square-mile (0.5-km2) area around the West River in Boulder County, is west of Boulder on the Boulder-Longmont county line. It was formed by hydro-glacial processes, and is a remnant of the ancestral Rocky Mountains. The western end of the ridge is steep, with steep, rugged terrain, as well as deep ravines, and slopes with sharp boulders and rugged rock outcroppings. In a region chockablock with flowing peaks, these are the most exposed of the Boulder County peaks. Like much of Boulder County, the ridge receives heavy rainfall during summer months. Oilsands of Rocky Mountain Arsenal History Rocky Mountain Arsenal is a former U.S. Army installation, center for the construction and storage of firearms, and of bomb cartridges, armor and ammunition. Use and ownership was transferred to the Colorado Parks and Wildlife Department in 2004. Over 200,000 tons of rock and soil were excavated from the site. The slurry pond lining 1.5 miles (2.4 km) of the West Slope (the western end of the ridge) has been damaged by leaks, and has been leaking into aquifers, by-passing Longmont Creek, since the 1940s. It is now a dumping site for Denver's sewage. The Army had cleared a strip of land, crosswise, north of the slurry ponds, as a dry-slope for military vehicles. As well, the Dry-Slope has been developed with numerous storage- and maintenance structures, including Fuel House, Guard Post, Laundry, Ordnance Personal Weapon House and Pinhole Paddock. Environmental contamination and oil spills The environmental contamination of the West Slope was brought to the attention of the Boulder County Local Hazardous Waste (BC L.H.W) Program following a 1983 incident involving gas ventilation drains. The BC L.H.W. Program found the West Slope dry-slope "aditionally used for vehicle storage" contaminated with asphalt, trichloroethe

Rec Room is a 3rd person virtual reality gaming platform designed to move VR from "experiment" to mainstream. The game is inspired by the complex network of facilities and spaces where people meet and play sports, hobbies, and other things, like those social worlds seen in the movies "Minority Report", "The Matrix" and "Eraserhead". In Rec Room the player is the leader, doing what they do best, leading other players around the game, while their avatars play a host of multiplayer games. They can then interact with players in their immediate surroundings through text chat, calls, and physical interactions. This allows for social virtual environments in the real world and the so-called "real world gaming". Key Features: Over 100 multiplayer games in a virtual reality platform Connect your on-premises gaming LAN using the protocol OBS.net or Open Broadcaster Software Experience next generation social VR with thousands of other players in local and global cross-network play Pelvis or Spine - Support for VR platforms such as the Oculus, Vive, PSVR, and Gear VR. Support for both 2.0 and 1.0 base sensors, so that everyone, no matter what current VR technology they have, can quickly jump on board Game Development Library - Players can use the tools they are used to, to create their own games. This gives rise to a new world of VR content creation. Unified game development across platforms – Unity and Unreal platform-agnostic. This means that all Rec Room games can run on all platforms. Synchronized Multiplayer – Rec Room with its enhanced social network, is a social platform where your network, your friends, your community, become part of the game. Gamified Social Networking – Players at every level can earn achievements, and make friends based on their play style and achievement milestones. Gamified Social Networking + Social VR –

Players can meet, play, chat, call and interact with players around the world, in your city or town. Rec Room is providing the social layer for other social VR apps. Flexible Freedom – Rec Room is a free-to-play platform and is created to be as scalable as possible. You can buy additional space. There is no inventory, so there is no hardware to maintain. Human-to-Human – Take part in the human side of gaming,
